Layers of the Atmosphere: An Exploration

The Earth's atmosphere is divided into five layers, each with unique characteristics. Understanding these layers is essential for grasping how our planet's environment works.

Troposphere: The lowest layer, extending from the surface to about 10-12 km. It's where most weather occurs and temperature decreases with altitude.

Stratosphere: The layer above the troposphere, extending to about 50 km. Temperature increases with altitude due to the ozone layer.

Mesosphere: The layer above the stratosphere, extending to about 85 km. Temperature decreases with altitude.

Thermosphere: The layer above the mesosphere, extending to about 600 km. Temperature increases with altitude due to solar radiation.

Exosphere: The outermost layer, extending from about 600 km to the edge of space. It's composed of thin layers of gas that eventually escape into space.
