Before You Read

As you read, think about the role of the federal government in the civil rights movement. How did the federal government help or hinder the movement? What role did the federal government play in the desegregation of public schools?

As You Read

Read the text and think about the role of the federal government in the civil rights movement.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT Civil Rights Movement: A series of protests and actions that led to the desegregation of public schools and other public facilities.

The civil rights movement began in the 1940s and 1950s. It was a series of protests and actions that led to the desegregation of public schools and other public facilities. The movement was led by people like Martin Luther King Jr. and Rosa Parks.

During the 1950s, the federal government began to take action to end segregation. In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled in Brown v. Board of Education that segregation in public schools was unconstitutional.

In 1957, the federal government began to take action to end segregation in public facilities. In 1960, the federal government passed the Civil Rights Act of 1960, which gave the federal government the power to enforce desegregation in public facilities.

The federal government also began to take action to end segregation in public schools. In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled in Brown v. Board of Education that segregation in public schools was unconstitutional. In 1957, the federal government began to take action to enforce desegregation in public schools.

During the 1960s, the federal government began to take action to end segregation in public facilities. In 1960, the federal government passed the Civil Rights Act of 1960, which gave the federal government the power to enforce desegregation in public facilities. In 1964, the federal government passed the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which gave the federal government the power to enforce desegregation in public facilities.

The federal government also began to take action to end segregation in public schools. In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled in *Brown v.
