

Transpiration

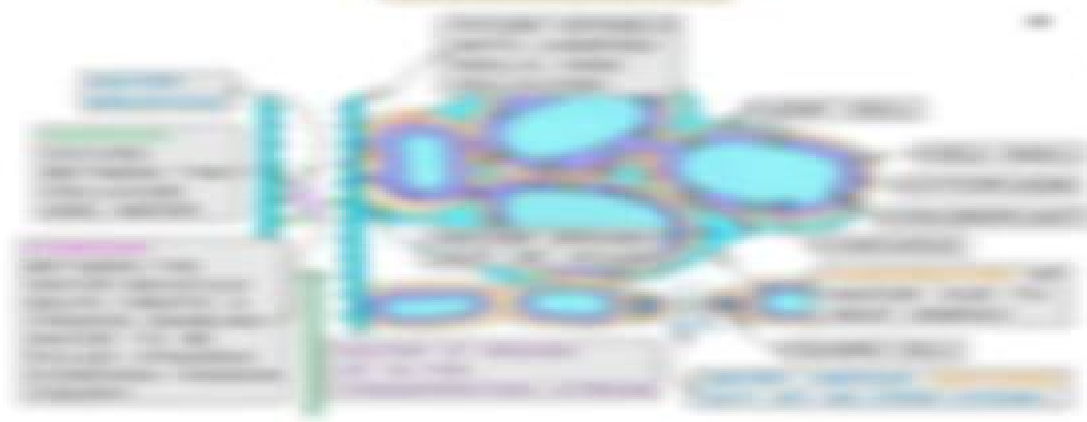

← = MOVEMENT OF WATER

Transpiration Pull

- Transpiration pull occurs from the evaporation of water from mesophyll cells.
 - 1. The water molecules in the air spaces between the cells and the outside world at high surface area.
 - 2. This causes evaporation and happens rapidly when stomata are open.
- Water molecules are attracted to each other by cohesion - creating a continuous column of water up the plant.

COHESION THEORY

- Water moves through the xylem vessels in a continuous transpiration stream from roots to leaves via the stem.
- Transpiration creates a negative air 'pull' on the water in the xylem vessels in the leaves.
- The water molecules are held together by cohesion. Water moves up the plant because the air 'pull' is applied up through the plant.
- At the top of transpiration from the leaves, therefore, water molecules are pulled up the xylem vessels up the plant.
