Illegal Literature David S. Roh, 2015-12-31 What is the cultural value of illegal works that violate the copyrights of popular fiction Why do they persist despite clear and stringent intellectual property laws Drawing on the disciplines of new media law and literary studies Illegal Literature suggests that extralegal works such as fan fiction are critical to a system that spurs the evolution of culture Reconsidering voices relegated to the cultural periphery David S Roh shows how infrastructure in the form of legal policy and network distribution slows or accelerates the rate of change He analyzes the relationship between intellectual property rights and American literature in two recent copyright disputes And in comparing American fan fiction and Japanese dojinshi he illustrates how infrastructure and legal climates detract from or encourage fledgling creativity Illegal Literature fills a crucial gap between the scholarly and the popular by closely examining several modes of marginalized cultural production Roh makes the case for protecting an environment conducive to literary heresy the articulation of an accretive rather than solitary authorial genius and the idea that letting go rather than holding on is important to a generative creative process In a media ecology inundated by unauthorized materials Illegal Literature argues that the proliferation of unsanctioned texts may actually benefit literary and cultural development

Energy Modelling and Fairness for Efficient Mobile Communication Ekhiotz Jon Vergara Alonso, 2016-03-01 Energy consumption and its management have been clearly identified as a challenge in computing and communication system design where energy economy is obviously of paramount importance for battery powered devices This thesis addresses the energy efficiency of mobile communication at the user end in the context of cellular networks We argue that energy efficiency starts by energy awareness and propose EnergyBox a parametrised tool that enables accurate and repeatable energy quantification at the user end using real data traffic traces as input EnergyBox offers an abstraction of the underlying states for operation of the wireless interfaces and allows to estimate the energy consumption for different operator settings and device characteristics The tool is used throughout the thesis to quantify and reveal inefficient data communication patterns of widely used mobile applications We consider two different perspectives in the search of energy efficient solutions From the application perspective we show that systematically quantifying the energy consumption of design choices e.g. communication patterns protocols and data formats contributes to a significantly smaller energy footprint From the system perspective we devise a cross layer solution that schedules packet transmissions based on the knowledge of the network parameters that impact the energy consumption of the handset These attempts show that application level decisions require a better understanding of possible energy apportionment policies at system level Finally we study the generic problem of determining the contribution of an entity e.g. application to the total energy consumption of a given system e.g. mobile device We compare the state of the art policies in terms of fairness leveraging cooperative game theory and analyse their required information and computational complexity We show that providing incentives to reduce the total energy consumption of the system as part of fairness is tightly coupled to the policy selection Our study provides guidelines to select an appropriate policy depending on the characteristics of the system
