

Laboratory Activity 42 — Student Laboratory Packet

Making Connections

A Laboratory Activity for the Course Environment

Measuring Competencies

In this online environment, students are given feedback for progress on the course itself. But students themselves have indicated that progress requires a few other ingredients that a computer (and/or a teacher) might not be able to give. To this end, the instructor is provided with a few suggestions for how to help students measure their progress. Many of these suggestions are intended to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

Following are suggestions for how to help students measure their progress. The suggestions are intended to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself. The suggestions are intended to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

In this part of the Laboratory activity, you will find a list of suggestions for how to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

Notes

Notes for the course, including the Laboratory activity, are designed to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

Another important note is that the Laboratory activity is designed to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself. The Laboratory activity is designed to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

Students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself are the ones who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself. The Laboratory activity is designed to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.

Making Connections is a laboratory activity developed by the National Science Foundation and is a part of the course environment. The Laboratory activity is designed to help students who are struggling with the course and who are struggling with the course itself.
