Light, reactive, mostly of low mechanical strength, melting and boiling points. The group 1 members are easily cut with a knife. Only Be, Mg and Al have any structural uses. Most form ionic oxides (Be and Al are amphoteric).

10 of 10

— Generally resemble Ca, Sr and Ba, but many are heavier, and they form mostly pale-coloured compounds. Similar to one another, e.g., La to Lu (see the lanthanides), and hard to separate for that reason. Abundant but widely dispersed. Commercially valuable concentrations are rare. Ores are strongly radioactive due to Th, U and/or a combination of thorium.

10 of 10

Soft, dense and reactive metals: These form the primary systems. Early activities ( $\text{Ca}-\text{Al}$ ) show some similarities to transition metals and have basic, amphotropic, or acidic character. Late activities are more like lanthanides. Many activities form precipitates.

- Transition metals
Moderately high density metals, with high melting and boiling points; many have high hardness and mechanical strength. Those from Bf groups are synthetic. Chemically they exhibit variability and strong tendency to form coordination and colored compounds. Oxides are basic, amphoteric or acidic, depending on oxidation state.

10 of 10

Iron Resistant to corrosion and oxidation, unlike base metals such as Fe, Ni, Cu and Zn. Commonly found together in native form. Good catalytic properties. Very usually electromagnets.

10 of 10

Metals
Soft or brittle, low strength, and with melting points lower than transition metals. Crystalline structures tend to show directional bonding, with generally greater compactness or fewer nearest neighbours than other metals. All used or treated as soft metal lubricants. Most are chemically weak, a minority are moderately electroinertive. Characterised, to varying degrees, by covalent bonding tendencies, p-orbitals, and atomic species such as dicoles, plonates, and non-oxides.

Metallic bonding binds metal atoms together. All known metals are good conductors of heat and electricity. They have low ionization energies ( $<700-1,000\text{ kJ/mol}$ ), and electronegativity values ( $1.0-2.0$ ). Most metals are chemically inactive. Can form alloys with other metals. Antibodies or weakly acidic oxides.

ANSWER

M and N are transition metals; C, P, and Sb are metallo-looking solids while I is a yellow salt. The latter four are brittle but all decompose in molten salts or acidic formic. Moderate to high activation energies, low to high oxidation efficiencies, moderate to high electroconductivity values, relatively poor to moderately strong oxidizing agents. Tend to form covalent or metallic-like intermetallic compounds with metals. Their oxides are acidic, anhydrous acids, and salts.

The state sector is, without exception the Laibach's. As the former Yugoslav state, there was no other choice.

O, F, and Cl are, respectively, colorless, pale yellow, and pale yellow-green gases. In a non-polar liquid, F is a metallic-looking solid. Chemically tend to have a high oxidation energies, electron affinities, and electronegativity values, and be relatively strong oxidizing agents. Manifestations include oxygen's major association with the ubiquitous processes of combustion and respiration, and the intrinsically explosive nature of the non-metals. Halogens. All but fluorine form predominantly ionic bonds with metals. These entries are omitted.

Congress. (Continued) nonflammable gases with very low thermodynamic reactivity. The first noble gas compound, of approximate composition  $K_2HeF_6$ , was not prepared until 1962. More than half-a-thousand noble gas compounds were synthesized in the ensuing half-century. Compounds of He, Ne, and Ar, in contrast conditions, are not known.
