A map of the United States showing the distribution of the three major groups of Native Americans. The Eastern Woodlands group is shown in blue, covering the eastern half of the continent. The Great Plains group is shown in orange, covering the central region. The Western group is shown in green, covering the western half of the continent. A legend in the top left corner identifies the groups and their corresponding colors.

However, in the early 1970s, environmental education began to be implemented and programs established by various state and national agencies (1970s) and numerous environmental organizations (1980s).
