

Critical Thinking in Reflective Writing

6 pages | 1489 words

Introduction

The purpose of this portfolio is to reflect my abilities, understandings, progress and achievement in Reading and Writing about Literature. I choose the Title of my portfolio to be 'Critical Thinking' because during class discussions the Lecturer would often say that we 'need to think'. Therefore, reflective writing was used to show how we are thinking about a topic or situations. Reflective writing requires us as students to dig very deep when analyzing stories such as 'Luis and The House on Mango Street', and various poems, in an effort to find the deeper meaning. According to Kelley Griffith, 'A Strategy for interpreting literature, especially those works you can't seem to get into or can't seem to like, is to relate them to your own life and so this course has taught me to do exact that. Here is a list of possible information to include: According to John Locke, 'Reading furnishes the mind only with materials of knowledge; it is thinking that makes what we read ours.' Being a person who doesn't read a lot and also been out of the classroom as a student for so long, the beginning of this course was quite a challenge for me. I had to relearn writing by breaking out of my old habits and finding something new. LIT1007 forced me to develop time management skills in order to balance home, work, and school. I created a ritualistic habit of going to bed between 1:00am and 2:00am trying to read and complete assignments on time. I must admit that my first attempts on class assignments were very depressing especially writing Reflective Essay. The first essay I submitted I got a grade that I considered to be unacceptable and I felt dunce. However, luckily I got a chance to send a second draft, so I tried to improve my writing and my grade increased a bit. Poetry Analysis was also a challenge for me because of the figurative languages used by writers, sometimes it is difficult to see things through their eyes but with continuous practice my writing improved more and more, enhancing my writing skills and enabling me to understand literature, reading and writing. LIT1007 has taught me how to read and develop my critical thinking ability. The course allows me to thoroughly examine Cisneros book The House on Mango Street. In the book Cisneros weaves several delicate literary allusions into many of her vignettes highlighting a number of social issues with racism been the major. By reading these vignettes I engaged more deeply with the story itself. I also realized that in analyzing the different vignettes and putting them all together to form a complete story, I was reading against my own personal thoughts about the story and integrating the two through my writing. LIT1007 showed me the relevance of team work. With the understanding that there is always going to be a lot more room and need for improvement in knowledge, this course has shown me that this improvement can be done with the help of others. The discussions I've had in class have also shown me how to engage...
