Relationship Analysis

Interpersonal relationships come in many different forms. It is what helps us build enduring relationships, establish open lines of communication, and resolve conflicts with our family and friends. When we are born we begin to build these relationships and bonds. These are the earliest relationships that we explore and form the basis for how we begin to communicate with others over our lifetime. It is these involuntary communications that form the basis of our interdependent family systems. Attachment theory argues that during our youth, we begin to build either insecure or secure bonds that will affect us for a life time. A child that raised with insecure attachment will often become anxious about building intimate relationship and fearful of losing new friends. But a child raised with secure attachment typically learn to communicate there feeling with others more effectively and build strong bonds that can last a lifetime. It is these interactions that will form the basis for who we will become. It will affect our self-confidence, self-esteem, and self-worth. If these attachments are properly nurture, we will lead more fulfilling lives. If not, then we can suffer the consequences and it can affect our physical and phycological well-being.

This relationship analysis paper will discuss the intimate interpersonal relationship I am in with my wife. It will talk about the four stages of an intimate relationship. It will explore the stages of an interpersonal relationship and explain the role healthy communication plays in establishing long-term relationship success. It will also discuss the role upbringing plays in the development of individuals communication skill.
