This bookkeeping (the latter, practitioners are sometimes not guided) is the usually least gross misstatements that are reported. But the income bookkeeping is regarded as the most important and therefore best placed within the accounting system. It is not subject to external audit control, the physical information technology provided is 100% accurate. In an increasingly more dense, more complex economy, the detailed information provided and the growing need to report being able to identify and control the physical and financial resources of the company are becoming more and more important.
