Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 15 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or other medical problems. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were monitored for HR and EE at baseline and at the end of the 10-week program. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on HR and EE. The HR of the training group decreased significantly from baseline to the end of the 10-week program. The EE of the training group increased significantly from baseline to the end of the 10-week program. The control group showed no significant changes in HR or EE. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- When a producer's price for a product rises, it is possible that the net change in government revenue will be positive, zero, or negative, depending on the elasticity of demand and supply. For example, if demand is perfectly elastic and supply is perfectly inelastic, a rise in the price of a product will result in a decrease in government revenue.
