coronary artery bypass graft surgery has irrefutably improved the quality of life of many patients However we are confronted with the finding that women exhibit a higher mortality rate than men. In part this difference can be explained by clinical parameters such as age, disease severity or comorbidity factors that have been well studied but which do not fully explain the observed differences. This is one reason why in recent years psychosocial variables have attracted special attention in this context. In fact, women and men having undergone a bypass operation vary a great deal with respect to e.g. depression, partner status and socio-economic status. Moreover, psychological well-being on the one hand and social isolation on the other hand definitely influence the recovery process, particularly when considered under the gender aspect. The Deutsches Herzzentrum Berlin has been actively supporting gender-specific research for many years. In this context, a large prospective study on gender differences in recovery after bypass surgery carried out by the Competence Network of Heart Failure was started at our Department for Cardiothoracic and Vascular Surgery. From the beginning of the study, psychosocial variables were included as being substantial contributors. The starting point of the study presented here by psychologist Dr. Friederike Kendel are recent empirical investigations about gender differences in coronary heart disease and the course of recovery after bypass surgery.
