Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a training group (TRN). The TRN group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The CON group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The TRN group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or continuous darkness. Tapes that are too long or too short can change the phase of the clock.
- Artificially imposed rhythms will eventually alter all biological rhythms in a population, the length of the day was first demonstrated by the well known experiments.
- The endogenous rhythms are therefore the way that change the phase of the clock, the period of the rhythms is not affected by the imposed rhythms, but is stable for these periods of approximately 24 hours, but can be modified by the 24 hour day.
