The Civil Rights Movement

The Civil Rights Movement is known as a period of time in the 1950s and 1960s that really began about 100 years earlier, after the American Civil War. The Civil Rights Movement occurred because of the desire for racial equality after the end of slavery in America.

After the Civil War, the American South was created. There were different segregation, which meant people were kept separate. There were segregation laws in schools and in public places. There were laws that said that people could not mix with each other.

But people in the South were not happy with the Segregation laws. They wanted to be treated as equals. So they started to fight back. They started to go to school with white people. They started to sit at the same tables as white people. They started to go to the same places as white people.

One of the first black children to desegregate schools in the South was Ruby Bridges. She was the only black child to go to an all-white elementary school in New Orleans, Louisiana, in 1960.
