

6. Japanese Internment During World War II

In February 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, following the attack by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor and the declaration of war between the two countries, signed an Executive Order, which authorized the forced relocation and internment of around 120,000 Japanese Americans, most of whom were U.S. citizens. These individuals were removed from their homes, primarily on the West Coast, and placed in internment camps in remote areas under harsh conditions. The internment was justified by the government as a wartime necessity, though racial prejudice and wartime hysteria played an important role. The camps remained in operation until 1945.

Did you know?

Many decades later, the U.S. federal government formally apologized and provided reparations to survivors through the Civil Liberties Act of 1988. Each surviving internor received a one-time payment of $20,000 in reparations.

Reflective Question

Consider the treatment of Japanese Americans during World War II. Should governments treat their citizens in such a way during a crisis such as a war?

7. Tojo

Hideto Tojo was a general in the Japanese Imperial Army, who served in the Japanese War Command (Imperial Japanese Army). He later was appointed prime minister of Japan in 1941. Tojo was a strong advocate in Japan for a pre-emptive attack on the United States to prevent the U.S. from limiting Japan's ambitions. Although Emperor Hirohito was considered the ultimate authority in Japan, Tojo was usually able to impose his will on the Japanese War Cabinet. He thus acted much like a dictator. As World War II turned more and more against Japan, Tojo was forced from power in July 1944. Following the war, he was tried as a war criminal, found guilty and executed in December 1948.
