Laboratory 6

Earthquakes

OVERVIEW

You will do four activities in this lab:

- 1) Explore earthquake-resistant building techniques by designing, building, and simulating an earthquake that destroys a structure made of various materials.
- 2) Compile felt reports of a hypothetical earthquake, assign intensities to these reports, and draw an isoseismal map for the earthquake.
- 3) Locate an earthquake using the difference in arrival time of P, S and surface waves.
- 4) Simulate the behavior of dry and wet sand during seismic shaking.

Background information on the lab is found in the appendix at the end of the lab.

PART 1: STRUCTURAL SEISMIC DESIGN

DESIGNING YOUR STRUCTURE

The first step in this lab is to design and build your structure. After you have built the structure, you should let the glue dry while you complete the rest of this lab. Then, at the end of the lab period, you and your classmates will all be able to test your structures on the shaking table, and compare the effects of shaking on different types of designs.

As you are designing your building, keep in mind that the goal of this lab is to understand what factors cause buildings to collapse. Therefore, you do not want to over-design your building. Don't make your walls solid, or use so many craft sticks that other lab sections will run out of supplies. However, you might consider how different building heights, amounts of symmetry, or orientations of supporting sticks might affect your design.

Structural Styles to Choose From (one group per style so all are represented in class):

- Light Wood Frame – toothpicks and glue
- Heavy Wood Frame – craft sticks and glue
- Unreinforced Masonry – sugar cubes and glue (index cards as floors, roof)
- Reinforced Masonry – sugar cubes, craft sticks and glue
- Steel Skyscraper – wire and glue (index cards as floors, roof)
- Mobile Home – index cards and glue
