Answers to Protein Synthesis Guided Reading

Deoxyribonucleic acid
Double stranded
Thymine, adenine, guanine, cytosine

Protein synthesis is the process by which a cell builds a protein. It is the process by which the information encoded in a gene is used to synthesize a protein. The process involves two main stages: transcription and translation. Transcription is the process by which the information in a gene is copied into a messenger RNA (mRNA) molecule. Translation is the process by which the information in the mRNA molecule is used to synthesize a protein.

During transcription, the DNA double helix is unwound, and one strand is used as a template to synthesize a complementary mRNA strand. The mRNA strand then moves to the ribosome, where translation occurs. During translation, the mRNA strand is read in groups of three bases called codons. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid, which is then added to the growing polypeptide chain.
