Comparative Criminology in Asia Jianhong Liu, Max Travers, Lennon Y.C. Chang, 2017-07-15 This edited volume presents the diversity of comparative criminology research in Asia and the complex theoretical and methodological issues involved in conducting comparative research. With contributors both from the West and the East exploring these questions, the Editors have created a balanced resource as well as set an agenda for future research. The increasing pace of globalization means that researchers should be armed with an understanding of how criminal justice systems work across the world. In the past, comparative research largely compared Western countries to each other or involved researchers from a Western perspective examining an Asian country with models and theories developed in the West, considered to have universal applications. This work aims to correct that gap by providing a critical examination of comparative research, presenting quantitative and qualitative research data, and asking new questions that challenge prevailing research norms and provide an agenda for future research. This work will be of interest for researchers across the field of Criminology, particularly those with an interest in International and Comparative Research, research on or about Asia, and related disciplines such as Sociology, Demography, and Social Policy. This fine collection that goes to the rich distinctiveness of Asian criminology. The editors have brought together a wonderful collection of authors, mainly from the region. The distinctiveness of values and relational practices in Asia are recurrent themes that are well developed in this book and help us to make sense of patterns of crime and criminal justice in Asia. John Braithwaite, Australian National University. What theoretical, methodological, and practical issues must we confront in conducting cross-cultural studies encompassing Western and Asian countries? Comparative Criminology in Asia discusses these issues and presents exemplary comparative research. The introductory chapter and the introduction to each part by the co-editors are lucid and highly educational. This collection must be required reading for every serious scholar and aspiring graduate student in Asian countries so that criminological and criminal justice studies will be brought to a much higher level of sophistication. Setsuo Miyazawa, UC Hastings. Can there be, and should there be, a distinctive Asian criminology? What would this involve? The answer depends on what one thinks of the universalistic explanatory claims of Western criminology. Will these claims become self-fulfilling as these societies add to colonial influences a more deliberate borrowing of criminal justice models and established ways of pursuing discipline of criminology? Or will a more critical spirit prevail? This welcome edited collection by Liu, Travers, and Chang provides an excellent starting point for reflecting on these and other questions. Rather than attempting to provide descriptions of the variety of similarities and differences in this region, though there are some fascinating case studies of these, the focus is even more on exploring the theoretical approaches and methodologies used in comparing institutional and cultural differences by Asian criminologists and others. David Nelken, King's College London. Criminologists can no longer ignore the impact of globalization on the pattern and amount of crime as we experienced recently, nor can we ignore the global change of criminal justice policies to deal with crime. There is therefore a desperate need to collect data on how crime and criminal justice are influenced by globalization across Asian countries. On the other hand there are debates on the issue of culture specific vs pan culture theories of crime This collection addresses both issues in an interesting way Its publication is timely and welcome Chuen Jim Sheu National Taipei University
