

]Chapter 1 (The Evolution of Psychology)

Psychology is the scientific study of behavior and the mind as well as conscious experience

Systemic means to be performed according to a set of rules or conditions

Empirical means being capable of being verified or disapproved by observation or experiment

Types of research

- Basic is research seeking knowledge for the sake of knowledge like learning about space because you like space
- Applied is research trying to answer a specific question like learning about the pollution to battle climate change
- Translational is taking things you learn from basic research and applying them to a specific problem like learning about medicine because you want to then figure out a drug.

Early History:

- Philosophers like Plato were asking questions about the mind
- Physiologists like Ali ibn al-'Abbas al-Majusi detailed the anatomy of the brain
- Mind-Body Problem was a problem of how we can study the mind if it is unobservable
  - Dualism
    - Mind and the body are two separate entities that are made of two very fundamentally different forces so like physical and spiritual
    - Rene Descartes argued that the mind is inherently immaterial and therefore unknowable. He stated that our body is controlled by our mind exerting actions that moved through our bodies like tubes
  - Monism
    - Belief that the mind and body are one so going against Dualism
    - Thomas Hobbes stated that mental events were due to physical events
      - Important Idea for psychology that showed the mind can be studied by measuring physical processes.
- British Empiricism
  - Believed that all ideas and knowledge were gained empirically – through the senses
  - Observation is more valid than reason as reason can have potential for error
  - John Locke
    - Philosophy should focus on the capabilities and extent of the human mind. Basically, what can our minds do and how well can they do it
- Wilhelm Wundt
  - First psychology labs came from his students
  - Father of modern psychology
  - Used scientific techniques to study the mind

Structuralism:

- Break it down into elementary components to see what pieces allowed it to do stuff
- Wilhelm Wundt and Edward Titchener studied the mind in terms of the basic elements and used introspection
  - "Look within" to describe one's experiences
  - Focused on sensations which they considered the basic elements of consciousness. Not conducting experiments

Functionalism:

- Look at the function or purpose of the entire big picture
- William James and James Rowland Angell focused on investigating the function or purpose of consciousness like "what does the mind do"
  - Influenced by Darwin's theory of evolution
    - Stressed important of adaptation in helping organisms survive and reproduce

Measures of Personality and Social Psychological Constructs Gregory J. Boyle, Donald H. Saklofske, Gerald Matthews, 2014-09-04 Measures of Personality and Social Psychological Constructs assists researchers and practitioners by identifying and reviewing the best scales/measures for a variety of constructs. Each chapter discusses test validity, reliability and utility. Authors have focused on the most often used and cited scales/measures with a particular emphasis on those published in recent years. Each scale is identified and described; the sample on which it was developed is summarized and reliability and validity data are presented, followed by presentation of the scale in full or in part where such permission has been obtained. Measures fall into five broad groups. The emotional disposition section reviews measures of general affective tendencies and/or cognitive dispositions closely linked to emotion. These measures include hope and optimism, anger and hostility, life satisfaction, self-esteem, confidence and affect dimensions. Emotion regulation scales go beyond general dispositions to measure factors that may contribute to understanding and managing emotions. These measures include alexithymia, empathy, resiliency, coping, sensation seeking and ability and trait emotional intelligence. The interpersonal styles section introduces some traditional social psychological themes in the context of personality assessment. These measures include adult attachment concerns with public image and social evaluation and forgiveness. The vices and virtues section reflects adherence to moral standards as an individual characteristic shaped by sociocultural influences and personality. These measures include values and moral personality, religiosity, dark personalities, Machiavellianism, narcissism, and subclinical psychopathy and perfectionism. The sociocultural interaction and conflict section addresses relationships between different groups and associated attitudes. These measures include cross-cultural values, personality and beliefs, intergroup contact, stereotyping, and prejudice, attitudes towards sexual orientation, and personality across cultures. Encompasses 25 different areas of psychology research. Each scale has validity, reliability, info on test bias, etc. Multiple scales discussed for each construct. Discussion of which scales are appropriate in which circumstances and to what populations. Examples of scales included.

Assessing Psychometric Fitness of Intelligence Tests Gary L. Canivez, 2025-03-25. Assessing Psychometric Fitness of Intelligence Tests: Toward Evidence-Based Interpretation Practices addresses issues and concerns regarding appropriate ethical and scientific underpinnings for the appropriate interpretation of intelligence tests. Ethical test interpretation requires test users to consider the empirical evidence for individual and all test score comparisons and to make appropriate clinical decisions accordingly. This requires test users to have competencies in advanced psychometric principles. The chapters in this edited volume present a variety of topics including the intersection of ethical principles, test standards, and psychometric properties that guide evidence-based interpretation, surveys of empirical evidence in the literature for qualifying major intelligence test interpretations, and psychological measurement topics that impact psychometric understanding of what current intelligence tests can and cannot do. This critical discussion has implications for basic undergraduate and graduate instruction as well as supervision in clinical and research applications.

Test Theory for A New Generation of Tests Norman Frederiksen, Robert J. Mislevy, Isaac I. Bejar, 2012-11-12. The editors of this volume suggest that there are missing elements in the conceptualization upon which standard test theory is based. Those elements are models for just how people know what they know and do what they can do and the ways in which they increase these capacities. Different models are useful for different purposes; therefore, broader or alternative student models may be appropriate. The chapters in this volume consider a variety of directions in which standard test theory might be extended. Topics covered include the role of test theory in light of recent work in cognitive and educational psychology, test design, student modeling, test analysis, and the integration of assessment and instruction.

Psychoanalysis--A Theory in Crisis Marshall Edelson, 1990-02-02. Marshall Edelson identifies the core theory of psychoanalysis and shows how free association and the case study method can provide rational grounds for believing its clinical inferences about the causal role of unconscious.

sexual fantasies Dr Edelson has committed himself with gusto persistence and intelligence to a spirited defense of psychoanalysis as science not necessarily as it is but as it can be in the best of hands as it should be It is a defense that I hope can resonate strongly in psychoanalytic ranks It is also a message that I hope would receive a warm reception in that wider intellectual world where ideas matter and where enlightened social policy and cultural cachet are fostered Robert Wallerstein New York Times Book Review
