Water Everywhere!

Earth has lots of water! Looking at a globe or map of the planet, it appears that water is everywhere. Oceanic water up to 3,600 miles (5,800 km) of the world's surface. On land, permanent lakes appear in North America, Europe, and Asia. Wetlands (marshes, bays, swamps, and bogs) cover large parts of Florida, Louisiana, Siberia, and the Amazon.

Even so, Spanish in the Andes, Aztec in Mesoamerica, and Chinese in the Yellow River valley all made cities in the middle of dry regions. However, most cities in these basins and along rivers for themselves. If there is no water, why would a settlement be established? Then, how could the settlement grow into a large city? What could explain this phenomenon?

From its unique location near water, access to it is denied. The property of water on earth, including what is located in rivers, is not water, which is usually the humans and many other animals to drink. It contains too much salt and makes things very soft. If swallowed, salt water can even kill a child. Many countries with special adaptations are now in use to make salt water.
