Some of the most popular television shows in today's society are The Biggest Loser, Jersey Shore, and Big Brother. These programs and many others are classified as reality television. Reality television's main purpose is to attempt to portray ordinary people in unscripted situations. Clearly, these shows are inaccurately labeled as "reality television," and many individual's time is wasted as a result. Time for many is very valuable. Wasting a person's time because of an inaccurate description could be just as detrimental as wasting a person's money because of an inaccurate description. Many people watch these shows to view real life situations, but what they are really viewing is the complete opposite. This cultivates confusion about what is real and what is fake. Lastly, reality television programs are detrimental to society because they humiliate many of the characters. This is detrimental to the characters because of obvious reasons such as suicide. The effects of this on society are even greater. Many people watch shows such as American Idol because they find it humorous when some of the characters have awful singing abilities, and therefore humiliate themselves. In my opinion, this makes many viewers bullies inside. If an individual watches the misfortune of others to make them feel better about themselves, they are a bully. discussions of Latino media could be safely reduced to a handful of TV channels dominated by Univision and Telemundo. Today dramatic changes in the global political economy have resulted in an unprecedented rise in major new media ventures for Latinos as everyone seems to want a piece of the Latino media market. While current scholarship on Latino media has mostly revolved around important issues of representation and stereotypes, this approach does not provide the entire story. In Contemporary Latino Media, Arlene D. Vila and Yeddy M. Rivero bring together an impressive range of leading scholars to move beyond analyses of media representations going behind the scenes to explore issues of production, circulation, consumption, and political economy that affect Latino mass media. Working across the disciplines of Latino media, cultural studies, and communication, the contributors examine how Latinos are being affected both by the continued Latin Americanization of genres, products, and audiences, as well as by the whitewashing of mainstream Hollywood media where Latinos have been consistently bypassed. While focusing on Spanish language television and radio, the essays also touch on the state of Latinos in prime time television and in digital and alternative media. Using a transnational approach, the volume as a whole explores the ownership, importation, and circulation of talent and content from Latin America, placing the dynamics of the global political economy and cultural politics in the foreground of contemporary analysis of Latino media.

The SAGE Handbook of Media Processes and Effects Robin L. Nabi, Mary Beth Oliver, 2009-09-11 Part III emphasizes the various factors that influence the critical functions of message selection and processing central to a host of mass media application contexts.
