Questions And Answers 2023

Environment - Correct Answer-The environment is everything around us. It is the natural elements of air, soil, water, plants, animals, and people. It is also manufactured components of our world such as the indoor areas in which we live and work.

When using pesticides in any outdoor environment, always ask these two questions: - Correct Answer-1. Where will the pesticide go in the environment after it is applied?
2. What damage could this pesticide do to non-target sites it may reach in the environment?

In what ways do pesticides move? - Correct Answer-In air, in water and soil, and on or in objects. When pesticides move away from their target, environmental contamination may be caused.

Movement in air- Drift - Correct Answer-Pesticide movement away from the application site by wind or air currents is called drift. Pesticides may be carried off site in the air as vapor or particles.

Movement in soil and water- Runoff and Leaching - Correct Answer-Pesticide movement in water may occur by runoff into drainage systems, streams, ponds, or other surface water which may carry the pesticides great distances from the application site. It also may occur by pesticide leaching downwards through the soil where it may reach and contaminate groundwater.

Movement on or in clothing, equipment, plants, or animals - Correct Answer-Pesticide residue is the pesticide that remains in the environment after an application or spill. Residues may be treated on crops, feed products, or livestock. Pesticide handlers may bring pesticides into their home through improper or careless application.

PROPERTIES THAT AFFECT MOVEMENT: Pesticide Degradation - Correct Answer-After pesticides are applied, they can break into simpler and sometimes less complex chemicals.

PROPERTIES THAT AFFECT MOVEMENT: Persistence - Correct Answer-Some pesticides remain present and active for a long time before breaking down. Such persistence may contribute to long-lasting pest control and reduce the need for repeated applications. It is important to prevent any off-site movement of persistent pesticides, since they can have devastating effects on the environment.
