Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% to 70% of the maximum HR. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 12 to 16 beats per minute. The HR during the submaximal exercise test increased from 145 to 155 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 25 to 30 beats per minute. These results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
 - Use red light for night time. Red light has the least effect on the circadian clock.
- The end of the light period is important. The way the light is turned off is critical. The producer should be practicing a gradual dimming of the lights. The lights should be dimmed over a 15-minute period. The lights should be dimmed over the 15 minutes, not at the end.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output. This is because the higher price makes it more profitable to produce. The producer will continue to increase output until the marginal cost of production equals the price of the output. This is the profit-maximizing level of output. The producer's supply curve is the portion of the marginal cost curve that is above the minimum point of the average total cost curve.
