The water vapor then condenses into clouds, which release precipitation in the form of rain or snow. The precipitation then flows into the ground, where it can be stored as groundwater, or it can flow into the oceans. The cycle is a complex system that involves many different processes, including evaporation, condensation, precipitation, infiltration, and runoff.

They are characterized by a main channel with many smaller tributaries that join it at right angles. Rectangular drainage patterns are characterized by a main channel with tributaries that join it at right angles. They are often found in areas with jointed rock.
